

What to Look for in a Philadelphia Web Design Agency

One of the most important marketing decisions your business can make is picking the right Web Design Agency in Philadelphia. How do you tell the amateurs from the real professionals when there are so many choices? These are the most important traits that make a Philadelphia web design company trustworthy.

1. A portfolio and experience that speak for themselves

Always ask to see the agency's work. A trustworthy company should show off websites from different fields and show results like more traffic or conversions. The best agencies can show you case studies that show how their work directly helped businesses do better.

2. A good grasp of SEO

A pretty website doesn't mean much if no one can find it. That's why your Philadelphia web design company should know a lot about SEO, from keyword research and on-page optimisation to technical site audits. For example, Philly SEO Pro uses great design and smart SEO to make sure your website looks great and ranks higher.

3. Personalisation and Imagination

Stay away from agencies that use a lot of templates. Your website should show that your brand is different from others. A top web design company in Philadelphia will make sure that every part of your site, from the layout to the fonts to the content, fits with your goals.

4. Design that works on all devices and is mobile-first

Since most of your traffic comes from mobile devices, your website needs to work perfectly on all screen sizes. A professional agency makes sure that mobile users can load pages quickly, touch buttons easily, and move around the site easily.

5. Open communication

For a project to be successful, communication is very important. Pick an agency that will keep you up to date on everything, from the first idea to support after the launch. Philly SEO Pro and other local Philadelphia agencies are known for their quick response times and personalised service.
